Loss Aversion

Pattern: The holding-time asymmetry metric shows that the population median is 1.0, but the actual metric is 10.9091, indicating that the majority of trades result in losses, with a longer holding period often leading to bigger losses.

Evidence: The evidence for this pattern includes trades such as DIS (entry 2021-04-06 → exit 2021-08-04) with a 120-day holding period and a P&L; of -981, and BABA (entry 2021-10-20 → exit 2022-01-15) with a 87-day holding period and a P&L; of -2575.

Consequence: This pattern has contributed to a 27% risk contribution to the total portfolio drawdown, meaning that nearly a quarter of the portfolio's losses can be attributed to this holding-time asymmetry.

Herding

Pattern: You followed recent market momentum 88% of the time (vs population median 64%), indicating a tendency to buy high.

6. Recommendations

Based on the investor's behavioral analysis, here are 4 actionable recommendations for retail investors:

1. Be prepared to sell your investments if you're not confident in their long-term potential, rather than holding on to them out of fear of missing out.

2. Diversify your portfolio by investing in a mix of low-cost index funds and individual stocks, rather than following the crowd and investing in popular but potentially overvalued stocks.

3. Set a regular schedule for reviewing and rebalancing your portfolio, rather than letting emotions dictate your investment decisions.

4. Prioritize quality over quantity when selecting investments, focusing on companies with strong fundamentals and a proven track record of success, rather than chasing high-growth stocks that may not deliver long-term returns.
